Lincoln Boy First Volunteer for National Diabetes Study

Ana Merizalde
Staff Writer

A 7-year-old Lincoln boy is the first participant in a national diabetes study at the University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC) aimed at trying to prevent or delay the onset of diabetes in patients at-risk for the disease.

The boy, Jacob Marvin, qualified for the study after undergoing a series of tests which found that he has islet cell and insulin auto-antibodies, which are indicators of the disease.

Physicians from around the region have been screening relatives of people with Type-1 diabetes. The boy's father, Duane Marvin, has Type-1, insulin-dependent diabetes.

"Although Jacob doesn't have diabetes, his immune system is showing evidence for potential immune destruction of the beta cells which produce insulin," said

James Lane, M.D., an endocrinologist who is the principal investigator of the study.

Type-1 diabetes is a life-long disorder that usually occurs early and demands a lifetime of balancing treatment, diet and activities to control the disease.

This is the first time in the United States that this kind of trial has been done for type-1 diabetes.

The oral insulin study has been going on for two years and the injection protocol for a bit longer,

Watergate Reporter Comes to Omaha

Jason Kuiper
Staff Writer

Carl Bernstein, renowned author and journalist, criticized our nation's media for its current fascination with celebrities and celebrity gossip, saying Americans are living in an "idiot culture."

Bernstein, half of The Washington (D.C.) Post duo who broke the Watergate story that led to the resignation of President Nixon, spoke at the UNO's College of Continuing Studies Academy. Business and Community (ABC) breakfast at the Holiday Inn Convention Center Thursday morning.

Bernstein's topic was "the use and abuse of media power."

He accused the media of having gone astray, of doing the hard and often tedious work of uncovering the facts of a story.

He defined good reporting as "the best obtainable version of the truth."

The blame for the media's turn toward sensationalism and weakened ethics lies on the shoulders of media mogul Rupert Murdoch, Bernstein said.

Murdoch owns the New York Post tabloid, Fox and countless other media outlets.

"He has affected our (journalism) standards more than anything in the past 25 years. It is affecting the standards of even the highest levels of our press," Bernstein said.

He cited a headline from Newsday as an example of the falling standards of the press. The day of the re-unification of Germany and the return of anti-apartheid activist Nelson Mandela from prison, Newsday, which is not a Murdoch publication, devoted its entire front page to the break-up of Donald Trump and Marla Maples. Bernstein declared it to be part of the triumph of the "idiot culture."

A real concern exists that average Americans have begun to erase the distinction between real reporting and "porn journalism," he said. When broadcasting companies run shows such as "Jerry Springer," it can affect the credibility of real news programs.

"People begin to see them as one and the same," Bernstein said.

Carl Bernstein (S) Steve Houlton

"Reporters should challenge people, not mindlessly entertain them." Many so-called news shows and radio programs use race baiting, intolerance, and manufactured controversy to boost their ratings, he said.

Bernstein said he feels the media did a good job in covering the Clinton scandal, with the exception of the 24-hour cable news networks, which presented every new wrinkle in the case as breaking news.

He said the Barbara Walter's interview with Monica Lewinsky was legitimate news, given Lewinsky's place in history.

Bernstein, now a contributing editor to "Vanity Fair" magazine, feels the press has been harder on Clinton than they were on Nixon, and sees the two cases as dissimilar.

"Watergate was about a vast and pervasive abuse of power by a criminal president of the United States," he said.

Bernstein worked on the Watergate story with Bob Woodward for the Washington Post in 1972 and 1973 when both reporters were in their late 20's. The two traced the break-in of the Democratic National Committee offices in the Watergate building to President Richard Nixon and several of his top aides.

The story was told in a book, "All the President's Men" and a movie by the same name starring Dustin Hoffman as Bernstein and Robert Redford as Woodward.

New Yorker Magazine recently called the two reporters' columns for the Post during that time the third most important piece of journalism of the past century.

Bernstein's first question from the audience was one neither he nor Woodward has answered for

IST&E Names McClung Interim Dean

Tom McClung (S) Steve Houlton

The College of Information Science Technology and Engineering (IST&E) has named

Tom McClung interim dean, replacing Michael Mulder, who passed away in January.

McClung has served as Associate Dean in the IS&T college since its inception in July, 1996.

Mulder and McClung worked on developing the new IS&T college for the past two-and-a-half years, said McClung. "It is my goal to implement (Mulder's) vision."

Some programs slated for the new college, which is now working in conjunction with the engineering department, will include a stronger core curriculum, a new distance education program, which will be bolstered by a $1 million plus "investment" by US West announced last week, and new degrees in telecommunications and information technology, which will be added soon.

Because his background is business and administration, and not in computer science or engineering, McClung will not be in the running when the university looks to hire a permanent dean for IST&E, he said.

Trial for UNO Football Player Delayed

The trial of a UNO football player arrested for suspicion of misdemeanor assault and battery and disorderly conduct was scheduled to begin Monday at the Douglas County Courthouse.

However, due in part to the winter weather, the prosecution granted continuance to move the trial to April.

The defense had all six witnesses present Monday morning.

Christopher Cooper, a defensive end for the Maverick football team, was arrested Oct. 19 stemming from an alleged incident where UNO sophomore Andrew Liakos was thrown over a second floor balcony, and a second man was later beaten during an Oct. 11 party, allegedly by Cooper and a friend.

The police report said Cooper's friend held the second man down while Cooper hit him in the head with two beer bottles. The alleged victim received medical attention and was released.

Shortly after the incident, Head Coach Pat Behrns suspended

Cooper, but allowed him to return to practice later that week.

Several witnesses were called to testify in the trial, including Cat Eldridge, a former Gateway reporter who originally reported the story.

Eldridge was called in because witnesses she spoke with during her investigations gave statements contrary to the charges.

"They pretty much said that Chris Cooper didn't do it," said Eldridge.

Senate Says "Aye" to Coffee House

The UNO student senate voted Thursday to pass a statement that would encourage the establishment of a "coffee house atmosphere" in the food court of the Milo Bail Student Center (MBSC).

According to the senate's letter of statement, "Mava Java", as it would be called, would offer students a relaxing area to sit and enjoy coffee, chais, teas and desserts, such as biscotti and cookies.

The coffee house, which would be located in the rotunda area of the foot court, would have soft seating, including couches and chairs, volume control speakers and a small stage for performances.

It would also be partially closed to the rest of the food court to create the relaxing atmosphere.

Students should see something shortly after spring break, said Guy Conway, director of MBSC.

"I think we need to give (students) some sort of atmosphere, the more they're in the student center," said Jon Shradar, student president/regent, "the more they will be involved."

Awards Bestowed to Top Teachers

Tony Dreibus
News Editor

The University of Nebraska has announced the recipients of its highest accolades granted to faculty members.

The Excellence in Teaching in an Academic Department Award, Outstanding Teaching and Instructional Creativity awards, and Outstanding Research and Creative Activity award winners represent faculty members from all four University of Nebraska campuses.

UNO's Cassia Spohn, Ph.D., director of graduate studies in the criminal justice department, received one of two Outstanding Research and Creative Activity awards for her research on issues of race, gender, equity justice. Spohn also served on the faculty of the Goodrich Scholarship Program.

UNMC's was the other winner of the award for his research efforts, which have advanced understanding of the mechanisms involved in regulating cerebral blood flow. His work focuses on more effective therapeutic interventions to prevent or reduce the consequences of strokes and other cerebrovascular damages.

Winners of the Outstanding Teaching and Instructional Creativity awards were Stephen M. Buhler, Ph.D., associate professor of English at UNL and Paul Kelter, Ph.D., associate professor of chemistry at UNL.

The University-wide Departmental Teaching award went to the department of psychology at UNK.

Each individual award winner will receive a $3,500 stipend, and the departmental award provides $25,000 for use in further enhancing instructional programs within the department.

History Department to Hold Conference

Tony Dreibus
News Editor

The UNO history department will host its 42nd annual Missouri Valley History Conference, which will be held March 11-13 at the Regency West Best Western Hotel.

The conference will feature topics such as troop movements during the Civil War, religion in the American West, studies in race and public policy, medicine and female patients at risk, history of science and exploration, religious art and architecture in the midwest and Native Americans in Canada and the United States.

The Phi Alpha Theta History Honor Society will play host to luncheons Thursday and Saturday. Mary Robertson, William A. Moffett chief curator of manuscripts Huntington library, will be the guest speaker Friday.

Around 400 people from colleges, universities, historical societies, government agencies and other professional historians are attracted to the event, which will have exhibits from book companies and regional historical museums and societies.

For more information on the conference, contact Oliver Pollak in the UNO history department at 554-4821.

UNO Students Act as Mentors, Too

Jenny Boonstra
Staff Writer

Being a "Big" means listening to and learning from you "Little," but most of all, it means being there.

Big Brothers-Big Sisters of the Midlands is committed to assisting children primarily from single parent homes. The program brings together caring and committed adults with children on a one-to-one basis, said Amy Peterson, recruitment coordinator.

Big Brothers-Big Sisters of the Midlands matched 600 children in 1998 with a Big Brother or Big Sister. However, the agency has 150 boys on a waiting list for a Big Brother, Peterson said.

She said several UNO students are involved in the program and it's a great way to help the community.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters really do make a difference in the lives of children. Children participating in the program were 46 percent less likely to start using illegal drugs and 27 percent less likely to begin using alcohol. Fifty-two percent of them were less likely to skip a day of school, 37 percent were less likely to skip a class and 33 percent were less likely to engage in violence. The study also showed that the children were more confident in their performance of schoolwork and generally more trusting of their parents or guardians.

The Little Brothers and Little Sisters range from age 7 to 15. The Little Brother or Sister generally comes from a single parent family, but, there are exceptions, Peterson said.

Volunteers who donate their time as a big brother or big sister must be willing to commit once a week to their little brother or sister, for at least a six-month period. "We have had matches that have lasted three years," she said.

Big Brothers-Big Sisters of the Midlands have a professional staff that screens all applicants before matching them with waiting children. The Little Brothers and Sisters are also screened for likes, dislikes and hobbies. The purpose of screening both the applicant and child is to ensure the brothers and sisters will be compatible, Peterson said.

The Big and Little can decide together what activity they want to do. Some of the activities include Maverick hockey, basketball games, movies and bowling.

Big Brothers Big Sisters of the Midlands is a non-profit organization so it relies on fund-raisers. Many local businesses offer Big Brothers and Big Sisters discounts.

For more information on the program, contact Amy Peterson 330-2449, ext. 111, or visit Big Brothers-Big Sisters of the Midlands on the web at www.bigomaha.com.

Capel Cottage Revue: Women Are From Venus, Men Are...Basically Pigs

After literally minutes of exhaustive research, I have come to the conclusion that men are women get sick differently.

When women get sick, it's just darn inconvenient, not to mention downright inconsiderate.

Women break a leg or catch the flu and what happens? They lie around all day in bed sleeping or reading magazines, leaving us men to fend for ourselves. Cooking and cleaning. Washing clothes and changing dirty diapers. Disgusting!

Do you women realize how much this housework stuff cuts in to college basketball on ABC? Heck, on a Saturday we could miss a whole three quarters of a Husker game. I don't even want to think about Sundays and the possibility of losing some Chiefs action.

Do you have any idea how unfair this is?

You NEVER see men acting like little babies when we get hurt or sick. You NEVER hear men saying things like, "Honey, could you get me another pillow?" or "Honey, I'm really hungry." or "Honey, I can't reach the remote control."

Just doesn't happen.

In fact, 99.7 percent* of all men get out of bed and head to work no matter how bad they feel. I've even gone to the office with a splinter in my hand.

How about that, huh?

Here's something else my research has uncovered: men believe there is a group of six women living in an asylum somewhere north of Kearney whose sole job is to come up with names for new recipes published in monthly women's magazines.

Have you ever read some of these recipe gems—I mean, without laughing?

When men name recipes, it's simple: Big bowl of popcorn with salt and butter; Slab of beef on the grill; Ham and cheese on rye with a Miller Lite.

Easy.

You know what you're getting.

When women name dishes, it's a different story: Tropical excitement salad a la prune and spinach; Three bean calico chiffon meatballs italiano; Aunt Bertha's puffy cloud dream cake with golden angel hair silver-speckled sugar frosting.

What?

And finally, men believe beautiful women won't look at them, or flirty, or anything unless we have our stomachs tucked in and are wearing PowerMax 200 t-shirts.

"Excuse me, sir. Could you tell me where..."

"I life weights, you know."

"That's great. Could you tell..."

"Real weights, too. Not that rubber band machine..."

"Terrific. But I really need to know..."

"Go ahead. Hit me in the stomach."

Men believe women really eat this stuff up.

Muscle + stupidity = irresistibility.

It's a guy thing.

Why doesn't this game have an instruction book?

I suppose you might compare it to finding a needle in a haystack, but that cliché doesn't come close to attaining the true essence of it. You look, but cannot find. You dream but wake too soon. You hope, but it never comes true. Then when you try not to think about it, it jumps into your cranium and starts dancing around in circles.

You trust in fate, thinking to yourself, "I'm young, I've got plenty of time. Maybe, hopefully, it will happen soon." It doesn't. You become self-conscious, "Is it me? Do I look funny? Am I trying too hard?" Alas, you never seem to figure it out.

To avoid thinking about it you focus yourself on school, work, anything that takes you away. You keep coming back. Nothing you do can keep your mind from slowly making its way back to that central human drive.

So what now, what comes next? You get back out there, you talk, you make eye contact, you flirt—you pull out all the tricks. Despite all your efforts you soon realize that if you were being graded on your progress, you would have to withdrawal to avoid getting an F. But then, slowly, you start to narrow your choices. Only wait, something unexpected happens; you realize that you're not alone. And what's worse, your competition has already beaten you to the game. Almost all the good players to this game have already been taken, plus those that haven't don't seem to notice you exist. You try to stand out, to make yourself look different from the rest. It all fails, miserably.

You think to yourself, "If only I could read minds this would be a lot easier." After a wasted days effort of trying to teach yourself ESP, you give up on that idea. Soon you find yourself caring more about what's for dinner than who you're going to eat it with. "Why do I have to always be the one looking for the right words to start the conversation with, don't they care?" "Did I say that out loud," you think to yourself as the whole class stares at you with an odd look.

As you twiddle your thumbs back and forth, you see something sparkle in distance. "What's that?" You grumble to yourself. There it is, right in front of you, the one you've been waiting for, "the needle." Amongst all this hay you finally have seen the silvery needle that you so patiently have been waiting for. Maybe you should pinch yourself to see if this is a dream.

After being rudely awakened from this fine dream, your heart sinks to the bottom of your feet. It's never going to happen, is it?

It all use to look so simple and easy. You say hello, the two of you start to talk, and things progress smoothly over the next few short moments until you make an arrangement to meet a later time to get a chance to talk some more. There's one thing though; the one you have an eye for is usually sitting across the room, never next to you. You can't get up and run across the room to track her down in the hallway after class out of a deep inner fear of rejection. Then, when one finally does happen to sit next to you, you can never tell if she's being nice to be nice, or because she might be interested in you too. This is way too complicated.

But maybe that's your problem, you think too much. Always analyzing, and then re-analyzing situations that have even yet to occur. Suppose for second that you went after that girl after class and she didn't look at you like you were retarded, then what. Would you know what to do? Or have you ever even though that far ahead?

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to Tony Dreibus' article from March 2, "Mudd Presents Fees Proposal."

It bothers me to think that I may have to pay an additional $30 for student fees so the university can increase student health and campus recreation. Exactly what is the university planning on increasing for student health and campus recreation? Does this mean the students will get better hand soap in the bathrooms or maybe more automatic flushing toilets? Does it mean students will be given the chance to see more 12 p.m. hypnotists instead of attending their classes?

The problem is I know that voices like mine are under-represented in Student Government, and it's not because we don't care, but because most of us don't have time to continue to pay increasing university fees and stay active on campus.

Kathy Denker, before you ask your parents for $30 and approve Mudd's proposal, make sure you are representing the voice of all UNO students.

Sincerely,

Gabe Romero
Full-time UNO student

Aries (March 21-April 19).

You should really be feeling your oats this week. A massive dose of spring fever could hit about Monday and last all the way through Wednesday, at least. You'll hate being cooped up inside.

Taurus (April 20-May 20).

Join forces and finances with a partner on Monday to get what you want. A surprising development could increase your savings on Tuesday, and Wednesday, your best investment is on travel.

Gemini (May 21-June 21).

The competition is going to be tough the first part of this week, with your opponent pulling all sorts of surprise moves. But even if you lose, you win, because it'll be so interesting.

Cancer (June 22-July 22).

On Monday, the choice is between love or money, but maybe you can choose both. Tuesday and Wednesday are very busy, but also quite profitable.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22).

Fun and games are on your mind the first part of this week, which could make it more difficult to get anything else done. Unfortunately, you still have a few bills to be paid.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22).

The first part of this week will be good for renovations around the house, including buying new. Get the whole place fixed up so you can entertain a special friend on Thursday.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23).

The first part of this week is very busy as you juggle a full workload and a demanding partner simultaneously. Around Wednesday, things should start to quiet down.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21).

Your intuition is working well this week, and your energy level is high. That's good, because there's more than too much to do. You work hard for the money on Monday and Tuesday.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21).

On Monday, you get stronger, as the moon goes into your sign. Tuesday and Wednesday, you're at full force, and causing things to happen quickly.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19).

You're under a bit of pressure the first part of this week to get something done around the house. It could be your honey-do list, and your honey is getting tired of waiting.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb 18).

Looks like you're in school the first part of this week. From Monday through Wednesday, you're hanging out with friends, and learning a lot, whether you're in a formal educational setting or not.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20).

You can expect to run into surprises from Monday through Wednesday. Changes are happening in high places, so watch out. Thursday and Friday should be

Lane said. Individuals will be eligible to enroll in one of two studies based on their degree of risk for developing diabetes within the next five years.

"The trial is testing the question of whether you can put people on a treatment that will actually prevent or delay the onset of Type-1 diabetes," Lane said. "We have preliminary data to suggest that it does, but we don't know for sure and that's why we're doing this study."

"Disease prevention is much more desirable than having the disease develop and then try to control it," he said. "Patients (of diabetes) develop complications which include kidney problems, nerve problems, blindness and what not. So, if you stop it from happening at all, you stop those things."

The study, which is sponsored by the National Institutes of Health (NIH), is being conducted nationwide at more than 350 screening sites. The University of Minnesota, which is affiliated with UNMC, is one of the nine centers heading the study.

Lane said UNMC hopes to identify 10 patients for its portion of the study, which is limited to people at moderate risk of developing diabetes.

"There's an anti-body level in the blood called islet cell auto-antibodies, and in Nebraska only about 3 percent of all the people (579 patients) we screened turned positive," Lane said. "So nationally we have to screen lots and lots of relatives in order to find people who are at risk."

To Lane's knowledge, no side effects from the treatment exist.

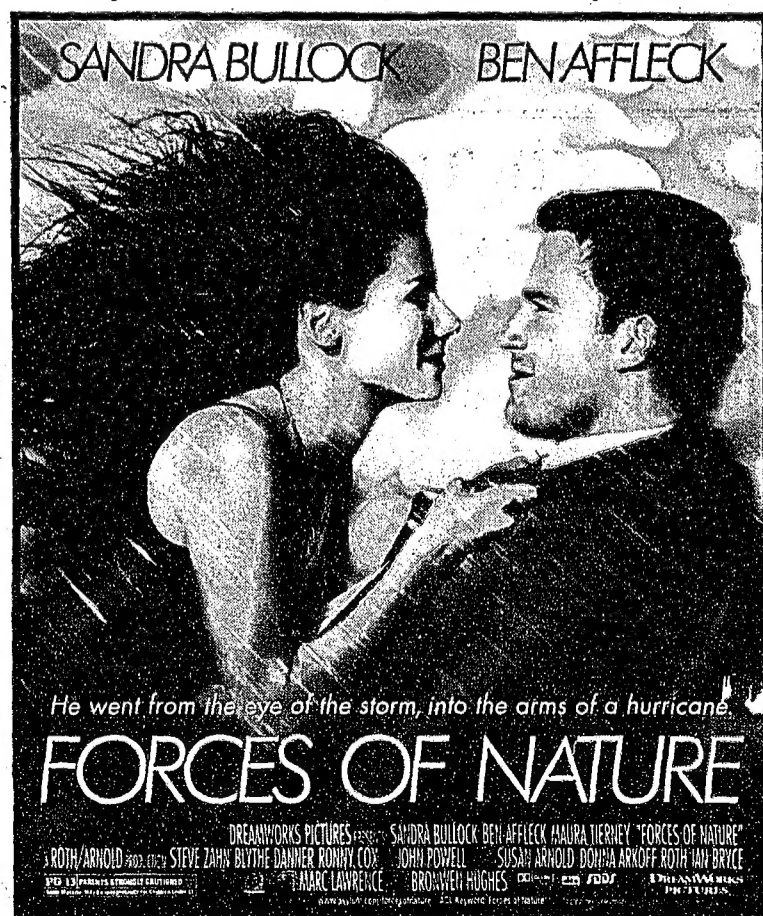

"At the national level there's a group that gets together, this is done in a lot of large studies where they put together preliminary data to make sure there are no negative results or side effects," Lane said. "If it was very clear that there was an increased risk of a bad side effect, or if the two groups were quite different statistically in their outcomes, then they would have the authority to call a halt to the trial and announce the results."

A Celebration of Culture

Native music and the scent of Moroccan grilled chicken filled the Nebraska Room of the Milo Bail Student Center Wednesday, where over 12 countries set up demonstration tables for a culture fair, kicking off the week-long International Cultural Festival.

Displaying everything from hand-made art and beads from Nepal to Henna from Sudan, UNO also promoted study abroad programs such as the Bethsaida Excavation project.

The food was a major attraction to many students and did not last long, especially over the lunch hour.

The Middle East presented Falafels with Tahini Sauce, which are ground

Quite The Feast

Native attire from over 20 different cultures lit up the Ballroom of the Milo Bail Student Center Saturday night for the finale of the International Cultural Festival.

"The International Festival really brings people together," said Omowumi Kayode, UNO sophomore banking and finance major from Nigeria.

The evening began as students, teachers, host families and community members mingled over mulled cider from England and Mexican taco pie with assorted nacho chips and salsa. Then it was into the main Ballroom for dinner and entertainment.

"The food was excellent," said Elisie Uyobe Kagbara a graduate student who was born in Togo but grew up in France.

The buffet dinner included; Greek salad, couscous pilaf from Northern Africa, boeuf rotie sauce au poivres from Southern Europe, lemon chicken from Polynesia, chole from India, Oriental vegetable stir-fry and walnut-filled puff pastry from the Middle East for desert.

During dinner, UNO staff member Dwayne Wilson filled the room with piano music.

Entertainment began shortly after dinner. The audience was greeted in 15 different languages including Farsi, Nepalese and Ukrainian. Next the fashions of Tajikistan, Mexico, Laos and many other cultures captivated the audience. The banquet concluded with native songs, skits and dances.

Each student will be able to act as an ambassador of their country, said Ghafar Azimi, director of International Student Services in a previous interview.

The acts depicted qualities from each country.

Sami Vasistha and Anita Pradhan performed a Nepalese folk dance, popular in the hilly regions of Nepal, which depicted love and compassion in a humorous way.

"The dance portrays everything," Vasistha said. "I wanted to show how loving the people of Nepal are. Even though they are very poor, they are smiling all the time."

Darrell Peterson, director of multi-cultural programming at UNO, said this week-long celebration of cultures "is a great opportunity for them to share things about their countries, languages and dress." "They really enjoy it," he said.

Many international students said the event was an experience unique to the United States.

"In Japan you would not be able to see so many cultures come together," said Keiji Okano, a UNO Freshman from Japan. "America is truly an international country."

The festival's diversity also drew former UNO student Arshdeep Singh Khurana, originally from India, to the banquet from the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

"Here you are exposed to so many cultures, to tell you the truth I would never have been exposed to this many cultures back in my country," Khurana said.

Many international students were attracted to the United States for its freedom.

"The thing I like most about America is the freedom," said Vasistha. "It is wonderful, you can do whatever you want. Back home it is not like this."

This freedom was enjoyed by many during the Cultural Festival, especially by those who, up until recently, could not practice traditions even in their homeland.

chickpea balls deep-fried with a sour cream cucumber sauce. This dish was joined on the table by floutas from Latin America, which are flour tortillas filled with spiced beef that is fried, served with various vegetables and sour cream; assorted focaccia bread from Europe, a soft, flat dough baked and sometimes topped with cheeses, olives, or tomatoes; pot stickers with Oriental soy ginger sauce, spiced pork wrapped with a thin pastry and then deep fried; Moroccan grilled chicken with chilled cucumber-mint salad and yogurt dressing from Africa.

Being able to serve food from each country is very special, said Ghafar Azimi director of International Student Services. "You can just go down the street to get, for example, authentic Colombian food."

Music also drew students to the Nebraska Room. Tunes by Sursudha, a popular band from Nepal, filled the room as well as music from the movies of India and the song "The Black Beautiful Eyes" sung in Arabic by UNO's own Ghafar Azimi.

Although international student Anita Pradhan does not speak Arabic, she said the song was "wonderful."

Each country had the opportunity to display special pictures, tell of their culture and interact with other students, teachers and people from the community.

"It is a great way for international students to really feel at home," Azimi said.

"It is important to hold on to your own culture while experiencing other cultures," said Ghaga Khalru, a senior broadcasting major from Sudan. "The international festival is a great way to learn about other countries and dispel misconceptions people may have about your country."

Khalru said sometimes the news shows depict only the negative side of foreign countries, especially Sudan. "You hear about bombings and killings but you don't see the beauty of the country," Khalru said. "This is one way to show people the positive side."

Sami Vasistha, a sophomore aviation and computer programming major from Nepal, felt privileged to tell people about her country and listen to what others knew about it. "Sharing ideas and helping people understand what things from your country really mean is so wonderful," she said. "One guy could name all of the gods, and actually people from Nepal don't know all the gods."

dancing like we did tonight," said Palestinian Abed Ajarami.

Ajarami, along with UNO students Jumah Al-Absy and Faisal A-Absy, performed a traditional Palestinian dance called DABKA, wearing scarves native to Palestine.

"We would certainly have been punished for wearing these scarves in Israel before the recent Israeli Palestinian peace talks," Ajarami said.

Although the practice of such traditions was banned in Israel for a long time, it was still important for Palestinians to remember their culture.

"It is good to keep up tradition," Ajarami said. "It is part of our identity. My daughter is only 16 months old and already she is learning to dance with us."

This feeling was mutual for Sasha Chaves, UNO freshman and member of the Mariachi Band that performed traditional Mexican tunes.

"The music is a big part of my culture and a big part of who I am," Chavez said.

The Mariachi band drew a large crowd and brought back pleasant memories.

"This music reminds me of the beauty of my home," said Raymondo Ramero a staff member at UNO since 1993.

The importance of the International Festival far exceeded aesthetic boundaries.

"Events like this really show the unity of students here at UNO," said Robin McDowell, a UNO freshman also working at the event. "Sometimes stereotypes can make it hard for us to get to know people, but this type of thing helps to break those barriers down. International students have opened my eyes to a lot of different ways of thinking," McDowell said.

The evening drew to a close with a live DJ dance. Students danced and laughed under sparkling lights to music from all over the globe.

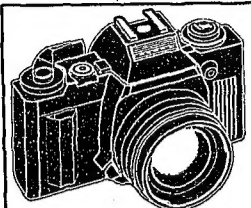

Azimi said the event was a great success. "This was the biggest crowd I have seen in all the years have worked here, it was excellent."

At midnight, things started to wrap up for the evening and students collected their coats as well as their thoughts.

"I learned that all people can come together and have fun," said Aminullah Ameni of Afghanistan. "It does not matter where they are from."

From left, UNO students and Nepal natives Deepta Rai and Sami Vasistha perform a courting dance from Nepal. "I wanted to show how loving the people of Nepal are," Vasistha said. "Even though they are very poor, they are smiling all the time."

ments have been made so the identity of the source will be made public.

ADVISORS: Help Students, Both New and Old

"I don't think it should be required at all, but then again, there are people who do need a source who knows what they're doing and what they need in order to give them a basic outline of classes they need and a schedule to go by."

Kurt Rena, a UNO freshman business major, concurs with Silverman, but feels that advisors are needed for students throughout their first year in college. "Student should be required to see their academic advisors their freshman year, but after they they shouldn't have to because you become used to the registering process and you know what is expected and needed."

Whether students feel advisors should be required or not, the fact is that students have advisors assigned to them and should make the best of this sometimes seemingly needless aspect of a student's education.

One person who strongly advocates academic advising for all students is Den Roncek, a professor in the criminal justice department. "Advisors should be required, particularly at the undergraduate level when dealing with meeting certain undergraduate requirements."

But this is not the only time advisors should be required, Roncek said. He also mentioned other scenarios that can spell trouble for students, while they are striving to meet the graduation requirements in a certain time limit.

"You always end up with courses closed and that's where students tend to make an inappropriate substitution, and if they don't see an advisor, that can come back and haunt them at the last minute and delay their graduation," Roncek said.

Whether you are a registration "know it all" or a registration "know nothing," the rule is to see your advisor, so it is advised you do so.

Can You Dig It?

The Bethsaida Excavation project that has drawn world-wide recognition is now open to the public, said Wendy Chiarbos, the project coordinator.

"It is the largest international student project at UNO and is growing," Chiarbos said.

Among the displayed countries of the cultural fair one table consisted of posters showing dessert landscapes, photos of Israel and pamphlets for the Bethsaida Excavations.

"It is the most important Biblical site which was never rediscovered by modern archeology," Chiarbos said.

This is an experience UNO students should take advantage of, said Kristy Leahy, UNO student and Bethsaida excavation participant.

"Studying abroad completely expands your perceptions," Leahy said. "It can open you up and let you explode out of your little box."

More information on the Bethsaida Excavations is available in the Arts and Science Hall on the UNO campus.

Couple Offers Cash For Intelligent Egg Donors*College Press Exchange

CHICAGO - The half-page ad started popping up last week in campus newspapers at the nation's top schools - Ivy League colleges, Stanford University and the California and Massachusetts Institutes of Technology.

A childless couple describing themselves as a "loving family" said they're willing to pay $50,000 to an egg donor who is 5'10", able to boast of scoring at least a 1400 on the SAT, athletic and who has "no major family medical issues."

When she ran the same ad on the couple's behalf in October without mentioning the price the couple would pay, only six women responded, Pinkerton told

The New York Times. The couple is offering the amount "because they can," she added.

Dave Matthews Brings Scaled-Back Sound To Miss. Students

College Press Exchange

COLUMBIA, Mo. - This is not your normal rock tour. The venues are small and theater-like. The spectators stay in their seats. Shouting is minimal, and the real smart-asses are on stage - not in the audience.

This ethereal gig belongs to Dave Matthews and his good buddy and sometime-collaborator Tim Reynolds. Their acoustic tour has been hitting college towns across the country since January and will be wrapping up later this month.

Matthews cut his band members free for a few months so he could do a strictly unplugged tour with Reynolds.

Having the rest of the crew along would have meant 60,000-seat stadiums and much higher ticket prices, said Ambrosia Healy, the band's publicist. The current tour's no-frills approach has allowed Matthews to limit ticket prices to $30 each.

"He's (Matthews) very aware that college campuses are where a lot of his fans are," she said. "It's nice to go give those fans a treat that they can't normally get. This is a way to give the fans a different, intimate experience."

"Dave Matthews goes out of his way to keep prices very low," she continued. "The band wants to be good to their fans. Just because they're more popular now doesn't mean they want to start charging more."

Matthews and Reynolds played shows at DePauw University in Greencastle, Ind.; Indiana State University in Terre Haute, Ind.; and Luther College in Decorah, Iowa. They're scheduled to appear at the University of Colorado at Boulder, the University of Utah at Salt Lake City and the Claremont Colleges of Claremont, Calif.

During the University of Missouri's Feb. 28 concert, Matthews looked like any other guy hanging out in a college coffee shop. Dressed in a brown shirt and pants and sporting dark, closely cropped hair, he didn't hesitate to yell "Shut up!" anytime his fans screamed, hooted or hollered between numbers.

"I think he's going back to his roots and playing college towns because he started out playing at fraternity parties," said Reid Forgrave, a junior at M.U.

who braved freezing temperatures from 2:30-8:30 a.m. one morning to get tickets to the show. Forgrave said he wasn't expecting to have to hop into line so early but was glad he did. By the time he reached the ticket window, more than 700 people were standing behind him.

Fans showed appreciation for Matthews and Reynolds' stop in the heart of the heartland by waiting for about seven hours in back of Jesse Auditorium to greet the duo's tour buses.

Just before 7 p.m. they were rewarded with a chat and autographs from Reynolds as he bolted in for the 7:30 p.m. show.

Three hours later, Mizzou students filling out of the concert said they were pleased not only to have experienced a night of Matthews' music, but his sense of humor as well. Matthews wasn't shy about belching into the microphone or cracking jokes about alcohol. He also interjected political statements about

South Africa before and after hit songs such as "Crash" and "Celebrate."

"We need to forgive all of the third-world debt," he said, prompting a round of applause from the audience before quickly snapping, "You probably don't even know what that means."

Mizzou senior Jenny Reisinger didn't expect Matthews to shine with only a guitarist backing him up, but she quickly changed her mind.

"I didn't even know I was coming until today," she said. "It was a fluke. I don't own any of his albums, but I'll definitely go buy one now."

Forgrave takes Matthews and his work more seriously.

"I think he's this generation's answer to the Beatles," he said.

Mavericks Share A Pair With Midland Lutheran

Maverick shortstop Jason Herzog, right, fires toward the infield while centerfielder John Cappellano looks on.

Jim Sheil
Staff Writer

The ability to get out of the gate quickly proved to be the difference in a double-header split between the Maverick baseball team and the Midland Lutheran College Warriors.

In the opener, Midland plated four runners in the top of the first and held off a late Maverick charge to win 5-3.

In the nightcap, UNO used a barrage of bunts and sacrifices to go up 5-0 after two innings. The knockout blow was provided by Maverick senior left fielder Pete England who cranked a grand slam in the fifth inning to put the Mavericks up 11-3. The Warriors came back with three in their half of the seventh to make the final 11-6. Pitcher Adam Ford (1-0) picked up the win for the Mavericks.

The late-arriving crowd of 100 had barely settled into their seats when Midland Lutheran's leadoff hitter, Shannon Elwood lofted a fastball from Maverick starting pitcher Brent Rasmussen (0-2) over the left-center field fence.

The big hit of the inning came from someone the Midland Lutheran faithful call "Big Daddy." David Davis is listed at 5-feet, 8-inches, 220 pounds and could be mistaken for a professional wrestler. Davis smoked a shot past Maverick shortstop Jason Herzog that ended up going to the wall for a double that scored two and put Midland up 3-0. They added one more run to take an early 4-0 lead.

A bright spot for the Mavericks was sophomore center fielder John Cappellano.

Before leaving the game with a wrist injury, Cappellano looked like he was taking batting practice off of Midland Lutheran hurler Jeff Halvorsen. Cappellano saw two pitches from Halvorsen and turned them into a triple and a double. On his way into second base for the double, Cappellano hurt his wrist sliding into second base.

When asked after the game if he was

Track Team 23rd in Nationals

The Maverick track and field team completed its indoor season by scoring 2.50 points at the NCAA Division II national meet held in Indianapolis, Ind. That gave the Mavericks 23rd place in the 31-team field.

The Mavericks' points came in two events.

First the Mavericks picked up a point for finishing sixth in the 4x400-meter relay in a time of 3:53.44. Karisa Foight, Katie McDonnell, Kelly Koziol and Sandy Derby ran that time for the Mavericks.

Derby scored the only other points for the Mavericks when she tied for fifth place in the high jump, clearing 5 feet, 7 3/4 inches. That finish gave her 1.5 points as she and Janet Eck of Fort Hays State had to split the three points awarded to the fifth and sixth-place finishers.

The Mavericks had other opportunities to add to their score but were unable to finish in the points. LaShonte McReynolds finished eighth in the 55-meter hurdles in 8.27 seconds, a time that was 0.10 seconds out of the points.

In the team race, Abilene Christian again won the indoor championship with a whopping 119 points. St. Augustine was a distant second with 44 points. Adams State (32 points), North Dakota State (25 points) and Lewis (24 points) rounded out the top five teams.

The Mavericks will have a little time off before starting their outdoor season with the Concordia College Invitational on Mar. 27.

Icemen Split Final Series; Mavericks End Season 11-24

Andy Nordmeier
Sports Editor

The UNO Maverick hockey team split its final series with the Minnesota State-Mankato Mavericks in Mankato, Minn. last weekend.

Minnesota State won 4-2 Friday night before the Mavs picked up a 5-4 win Saturday night to close out its regular season.

Saturday night saw UNO post the win but nearly coughed up a four-goal lead in the process.

The first period belonged to UNO as they scored a pair of power play goals to seize a 2-0 lead.

Defenseman Tom Kowal scored at 5:02 to make it 1-0. His power play strike was assisted by Jason White and Jeff Hoggan.

The second period saw more of the same as UNO's first two shots made it into the net and chased Pateman to the showers.

Glover picked up his second of the night at the 44-second mark with Hoggan and Kowal getting assists on the goal that put Nebraska-Omaha up 3-0. Mike Skogland added an unassisted tally at 4:32 to put the Nebraska-Omaha ahead 4-0.

That would be more than enough for Minnesota State Head Coach Don Brose as he yanked Pateman in favor of Todd Kalzenberg, the goaltender who played in both games in Omaha earlier this season.

Perhaps changing goaltenders sparked Minnesota State as they started to make a rally.

Jesse Rooney broke the shutout bid by Nebraska-Omaha senior goaltender Jason Mitchell when he scored at 12:59 of the second period on the power play. That cut it to 4-1.

SH Steve Houlton

UNO's John Rosso scored at 2:58 to put his team up 5-2 and seemingly put things away.

It didn't.

Aaron Fox brought Minnesota State back to within two goals at 5-3 when he beat Mitchell at the 4:28 mark of the third period. Minnesota State's Dwight Hurst scored at 8:09 and made it a 5-4 game. That set up a war over the final 12 minutes of the game to see if Minnesota State could tie it up or if Nebraska-Omaha would hang on.

In the end, UNO did hang on to the lead and won their third road game of the season. Mitchell picked up the win in his final collegiate game and stopped 21 of 25 Minnesota State shots.

SH Steve Houlton

Friday night's game had most of the offense in the first period and it went the way of Minnesota State as they posted a 4-2 win.

Minnesota State's Jesse Rooney drew first blood 1:03 into the game when he ripped a shot past UNO goaltender Kendall Sidoruk.

UNO answered back at the 7:21 mark as Jason White slipped the puck past Pateman to tie the game at 1-1.

The game continued to see-saw back and forth and the Mavericks answered with a goal off the stick of Nick Fohr at 9:53. Fohr's goal tied the game at 2-2.

Rooney would make his impact felt again before the end of the period when he scored a power play goal with 58 seconds left to give his Minnesota State Mavericks a 3-2 lead after 20 minutes.

After the first period, UNO was unable to dent the twine behind Pateman despite putting 18 shots on him in the final 40 minutes.

Sidoruk stopped 28 of 32 shots in the loss but did let in a Tim

Wolfe goal at 8:41 of the second period.

For the Mavericks, the season is over and they finish with an 11-24 record (13-24 including the exhibition wins over Manitoba). The split leaves Minnesota State at 17-14-5 and they will head to Grand Forks, N.D. to battle the Sioux of North Dakota in the first round of the Western Collegiate Hockey Association (WCHA) playoffs.

Gridiron News

The Maverick football team has added a pair of recruits to their roster for the fall, Nick Testa and Tyrone Brice.

Testa, a 6-foot, 175-pound wide receiver from Schererville, Ind., brings impressive career statistics with him to UNO. Testa was a first-team all-state selection in his junior and senior seasons. In those two years, Testa caught 99 balls for 1881 yards and 27 touchdowns. Testa broke all the receiving records at Lake Central High School.

Brice is a 5-foot, 10-inch, 195-pound defensive back coming to the Mavericks from Jacksonville, Fla. through North Iowa Community College. Last season, Brice had five interceptions at North Iowa CC and averaged nearly 30 yards per kick-off return.

Testa and Brice could be on the sidelines for the Mavericks when they open the 1999 season on Sept. 4 when the defending national champions Northwest

Missouri State Bearcats come to Omaha. Spring practice for the team opens in two weeks March 23

Mens' Basketball awards

The Maverick mens' basketball team announced its post-season awards and to no surprise senior guard/forward Corey Griffin was named the team's Most Valuable Player. Griffin averaged 20.9 points per game this season. Griffin's effort also got him named to the Daktronics Division II North Central Region's first team. The naming of the first, second and third-team All-Americans will be held on Mar. 17-20 at the Elite Eight tournament in Louisville, Ky.

Junior forward Robert Wettstein was named the team's best defensive player and led the way on the boards with 169 rebounds last season. Wettstein was also named to the North Central Conference's All-Academic team with his 3.12 grade point average in business administration.

Sophomore Kyle Mann was named the team's most inspirational player.

Softball is Perfect at 6-0

Andy Nordmeier

The Maverick softball team is a perfect 6-0 following the Pittsburg State tournament played Friday and Saturday in Pittsburg, Kan.

The Mavericks gave up just five runs in the six games and posted a pair of shutouts in the tournament.

The Mavericks started rolling with a 5-1 win over the host Pittsburg State University.

The game was tied at 1-1 after an inning but the Mavericks scored twice in the third and two more in the fifth to pound out the win. Pitcher Tara Buzzell picked up the victory.

The Mavericks hammered Emporia State 10-1 just 90 minutes later. The Mavericks held a 5-0 lead after two innings. They added another five runs in the fifth. Kelly Davis helped the Mavericks out with a home run, one of four extra-base hits for the Mavericks.

looking for a fastball in his second at-bat Cappellano said he guessed wrong.

"Actually, I was looking for a curve," the sophomore center fielder said.

Capellano came out of the game after Ford drove him in on a single to make the score 4-2. The centerfielder is expected to be out of action for a few days.

Each team traded runs the sixth inning with the Mavericks getting theirs on a home run from catcher Brad Prokupek to make it a 5-3 game.

Midland Lutheran's Brett Linder picked up the save by throwing a scoreless seventh inning.

Rasmussen took the loss for UNO but pitched well after the shaky first inning. Rasmussen came through the top of the fifth inning with the Mavericks trailing 4-1, one out and the Warriors threatening. The big right-hander from Ralston, Neb. struck out the next batter and forced the next Warrior to pop out to end the threat. Rasmussen went the distance for UNO striking out six and giving up one walk.

In the second game of the doubleheader, UNO started fast on offense and defense.

In the top of the first, UNO turned its first double play of the day to get out of the first.

The bottom of the first saw the Mavericks break into the scoring column. UNO's leadoff hitter, Matt Haynes, singled back through the box and Justin Siebler followed with a bunt single.

Next, Maverick head coach Bob Gates caught the Warriors off-guard by having Rasmussen, the No. 3 hitter who hit over .400 last year, lay down a bunt.

The startled Warriors made a throwing error on a close play and the bases were full. Mark Lehman followed with a sacrifice fly to break the ice. The Mavericks pushed another run across on Mike Haynes' sacrifice to put UNO ahead 2-0.

Jeff Kozeny led off the second inning with a single and came around to score on Haynes' bases-loaded, RBI groundout. Siebler followed with a sacrifice fly that scored Paul Broderick and put UNO up 4-0.

The Mavs added one more run on a frozen rope RBI double by Rasmussen, plating Steve Synowicki.

The Warriors started to chip away at the Mavericks' lead by scoring three in their half of the fifth.

Then Englund slammed those runs back for the Mavericks with his first career grand slam and second home run of the year to put the Mavericks ahead 11-3 in the sixth.

The Warriors did score three times in theseventh and loaded the bases but Maverickpitcher John Shoemaker recorded the final out and gave the Mavericks their first win of 1999.

With the split, the Mavericks are 1-2 with their next games being a return engagement with Midland Lutheran in Fremont, Neb. today at 4:30 p.m., wetaher permitting.

The Mavericks lost their games over the weekend to Mother Nature and have a full schedule this week because of it.

They will have a twinbill against Morningside 2:30 p.m tomorrow at College World Series Park which is a makeup of a lost set of games. The Mavericks were scheduled to play Northwest Missouri State at 1:30 p.m Thursday and that game is still on the schedule as of press time. Friday, the Mavericks have another rescheduled series when they host Doane for two games starting at 1:30 p.m

After the eight-game homestand, the Mavericks will take off for the pitcher's nightmare known as Colorado when they play four games against Mesa State and three games with Air Force over spring break.

SOFTBALL: Mavericks to Play Today

They closed out a perfect Friday with a 6-1 win over Northwest Missouri State. The win was as easy as one-two-three, as the Mavericks scored three runs in the first inning, two more in the second and one in the third to get the win in the five-inning game. Pitcher Michelle Manthei picked up the last two wins for the Mavericks.

Saturday was a new day but the same old story for Maverick foes. Oklahoma Baptist was the first team to lose to the Mavericks Saturday when they were blanked 8-0. Buzzell held Oklahoma Baptist to two hits while the Mavericks pounded out 11 in the win.

Manthei went back to the mound for the game against Central Iowa and she emerged with an 8-2 win. The Mavericks were helped by six Central Iowa errors and three extra base hits.

Then in the final game the Mavericks took to the diamond against a common foe, the Augustana Vikings. Augustana is in the Southern Division of the North Central Conference, the same one the Mavericks are in, and made it to the College World Series last year.

Manthei took to the mound again and this time she pitched a gem of a game. The game was scoreless through six innings despite the Mavericks having five hits and Augustana not capitalizing on three Maverick errors.

In the seventh, Tiffany Jones hit a sacrifice fly that brought home the game's only run and Manthei shut the door on Augustana in the 1-0 win.

The Mavericks also were scheduled for a doubleheader at Washburn University in Topeka, Kan. but results weren't available at press time.

The lone home games for the Mavericks in March are scheduled for today against Northwest Missouri State. The games are slated to start at 4 and 6 p.m. at College World Series Park.

PRINCIPLES OF SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

WHILE YOU'RE INVESTING FOR TOMORROW, IT'S NICE TO SEE NUMBERS LIKE THESE TODAY.

Planning a comfortable future takes patience and an understanding of the long-term nature of retirement investing. But who can resist a little bit of immediate gratification now and then?

While past performance is no guarantee of future results, TIAA-CREF's investment experts seek high returns over the long term, at risk levels appropriate for building future security.

Investment markets are, of course, volatile and the CREF accounts are variable annuities that are not guaranteed. That's why many people choose to diversify with the TIAA Traditional Annuity. It guarantees principal and interest, backed by TIAA's claims-paying ability, and provides opportunities for added growth through dividends.

Other numbers to think about: With over $200 billion in assets and 2 million participants, we're the largest retirement organization in the world, and the leading choice in higher education and research.

For over 80 years, we've pioneered new and better ways to help you build a comfortable future. If this all sounds good to you, there's one more number to consider: 1 800 842-2776. Call us to learn how our expertise can work to your advantage - today and tomorrow.
